A CRY FOR VENGEANCE

A Vast Mob Surrounds the Jail in San Francisco.

THE CHILD MURDERER WANTED.

Twenty Thousand Men Held Back by Officers on Guard—The Mob Repeatedly Charged and Finally Dispersed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov 12—The indignation excited in the community by the cold blooded murder of the 14 year old school girl Mamie Kelly by Aleck Goldenson, Wednesday last, hourly increases in interest. The people fully realize the dastardly nature of the crime. Threats of lynching are freely made, and the following card appeared in to-day's papers:

Murder! murder! murder! The chastity of our daughters has been dealt a foul and cruel blow. An innocent and harmless child has been shot dead by a cowardly assassin, a little orphan darling, left neither father nor brother to wipe the death-damp from her brow and avenge the cowardly deed! Men of San Francisco, attend a meeting at Metropolitan temple this (Friday) night, corner Fifth and Jessie streets, at 8 o'clock, and take such action as the meeting in its wisdom may adopt.

LYNCHING FEARED.

11 P. M.—An immense mass meeting is now in progress, and it is feared that a mob will make an attempt to break the jail and take the prisoner. Sheriff Hopkins has ordered his full force of deputies on duty at the jail and a large squad of police will assist them to preserve order.

THE INDIGNATION MEETING.

Metropolitan temple was packed to its utmost capacity and the whole block on which the building is located was also crowded with a mass of people anxious to participate in the demonstration inside of the hall. The meeting was presided over by W. H. Hobart, who addressed the audience, counseling peace and quiet. He stated that the meeting was not called for riotous purposes, but [illegible] to express the moral sentiment of the community over the last and most atrocious crime committed in this city. He cautioned the people to express their vengeful feelings and [illegible] to show its hand.

He was followed by Judge Roberts, who spoke in the same strain, advising that no overt act be committed to cast shame on the city of San Francisco.

C. H. Midliestadt, who announced himself as a dynamiter, was the only one who advised immediate action on the part of the gathered populace. He referred to the fact of twenty-two convicted murderers being confined in jail and said that forbearance had ceased to be a virtue. In conclusion he added: "If you are men proceed at once to the county jail, take the latest and most fiendish culprit from his protectors, and hang him."

"ON TO THE COUNTY JAIL."

Meanwhile outside the crowd was also addressed by a number of men, all of whom exhorted their hearers to preserve peace. Among the speakers outside were two men named Hamill and Hagerty. As soon as the audience came out of the hall a cry was raised of "On to the county jail!" It was soon taken up and in a few minutes a crowd which now numbered over 7000 people fell into line and marched to the county jail, located on Broadway between Kearny and Dupont streets, and about a mile away.

As the column turned into Kearny street its numbers were largely augmented, until by the time it had reached the junction of Kearny with Montgomery avenue over 10,000 men were in line.

On arriving at the jail they found that their intent had been anticipated. Forewarned was forearmed with the city authorities. In front of the jail were drawn up in double column forty policemen, who allowed no one to approach nearer than about twenty feet of the building.

The jail was brilliantly lighted up, and the scene presented offered a striking picture. The rigid lines of officers, immediately in front of its brilliantly lighted wall, the clear space in the shape of a semi circle in front of them and the dense, seething mass of men composing the background of this semi circle.

As there appeared to be no leader, the mob was entirely unorganized and without any definite line of action, but as the crowd increased in numbers they became bolder and bolder and soon began jeering and yelling at the police and occasionally throwing stones. The excitement on both sides became rapidly intensified, but the officers were held back by their superiors until what was considered a more dangerous crisis occurred.

A SPEAKER ARRESTED.

In the crowd [illegible] freely and [illegible] expressed the advisability of storming the jail, but no concerted move could be effected. P. M. Cann, who was one of the loudest in venting his indignation, was finally asked to deliver a speech to the crowd. He ascended to the balcony on the opposite side of the street to the jail and began addressing the crowd. When he had spoken for a short time, the police in front of the jail were ordered to charge, and in a few minutes McCann was safe behind the bars in a cell in the county jail.

Inside of the jail all the occupants were in the greatest excitement, but with faces expressing a determination to hold the jail at any risks. Sheriff Hopkins was on hand and had a force of forty [illegible], all armed with rifles or revolvers, ready for any emergency. Men were posted throughout every commanding position in the building from the roof downward.

While the turmoil was at its height Major-General Turnbull appeared at the county jail and held a conference with Sheriff Hopkins, the substance of which was that if it became necessary, the sheriff was to call on Gen. Turnbull, representative of the state authorities, for aid. Gen. Turnbull stated that this afternoon he had ordered a number of companies of militia to be at their armories in readiness in case of need.

THE MOB CHARGED.

Chief Crowley timely appreciated the need of reinforcements for his force, and another detachment of thirty-five were quickly brought to assist in guarding the approaches to the jail. With this augmented strength charges were made on the crowd at intervals. Clubs were freely used on those who were not spry enough to keep up with the retreating crowd. Many people were injured in these charges. No attempt was made, however, to make arrests, except where effort was made to resist the charge of the police. Of these cases there were several. The first was Victor Brady, aged [illegible], a [illegible] who stated that he was merely in the crowd through curiosity. Quickly following him came Henry Miller, a carpenter, who gave the same innocent reason for being in the crowd. He will carry remembrance of the event about with him for a considerable time, as he received a severe scalp wound from a club before he was taken in charge. P. M. Cann, who attempted to address the crowd in the heat of the excitement, was the next man brought in. He stated that his arrest was entirely unjustifiable, that he was exhorting the crowd to await the outcome of the action of the court before resorting to violence. He advised them to wait fourteen days, and if Goldenson was not then hanged then let the people break down the jail and mete out justice to him. He further stated: "I told the crowd if Goldenson was not hanged in two weeks there would then be time for them to take action and hang him, and I say the same now here in jail—hang him, hang him." McCann is a sewing machine agent at [illegible] Post street and has a wife and three children.

The officers who arrested McCann say that in haranguing the crowd he used the most extravagant and exciting language. Among other things they quote him as follows: "If you will follow and protect me we will take him (Goldenson) from jail and hang him to-night."

THE MOB DISPERSED.

Not long after this a wounded officer, M. A. Cayot, was brought into the county jail. He was bleeding profusely from a severe wound in the forehead, and a surgeon was telephoned for. Cayot's wound was found to be a deep scalp wound, but not of a serious nature, though the flesh was cut to the bone. He only escaped having his skull fractured by the circumstance of his wearing a stiff and thick cloth hat. He stated that the wound was inflicted by a brick thrown from the roof of a house on the opposite side of the street. On this information being conveyed to Chief Crowley he ordered the entire block on which the jail is situated to be cleared, and a series of charges by the police followed, which ended in the streets being swept as far as Dupont street.

The crowd then began slowly to thin out and the danger was [illegible] past. The crowd was gradually driven further [illegible] until all [illegible] but a few hundred stragglers were left.

The excitement was at its height at about 10 o'clock, when it is estimated [illegible] were [illegible] in the vicinity. At 11 o'clock all was over.

THE MURDERER.

Early in the afternoon it was rumored that the sheriff, in anticipation of trouble, had removed the prisoner to San Quentin, but [illegible] it proved that such was not the case. Goldenson was still in the county jail, but was removed to [illegible] cell. During the afternoon when [illegible] were being fired to test them, he [illegible] the sound of the firing, and it is stated that at every discharge he [illegible].

He was seen to-night [illegible] in a condition of most abject fear. He would scarcely frame his lips to answer questions put to him. That his fears were real was evidenced by the first question he asked [illegible] "Will they get [illegible]?" He was assured that he was safe for the present [illegible] in a continual state of cowardly [illegible].

It is the general opinion that his counsel will ask for a change of venue, on the ground of public prejudice demonstrated to-night, and it is believed that this will be granted.

At this hour everything is quiet, but the guard at the county jail will be kept all night.

A TALK WITH STANFORD

His Views on Immigration and the Chinese Restriction Act

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov 12—"I do not know so much about the late state elections, perhaps, as the newspapers," said Senator Stanford, when requested to express his opinion as to what they might indicate in reference to the presidential contest two years hence. "It has appeared to me that returns have not been very full and we do not even know the result in Connecticut. The subject is one to require study and some time to qualify any one to give an opinion. I believe, however, that the republican party will carry the next presidential election. That party is opposed to anarchy and disorder and embodies the great principles of the Declaration of Independence and in so doing has the confidence and following of the American people."

THE NATURALIZATION LAWS.

"Do you think that the time has arrived when it would be advisable to repeal the naturalization laws?"

"That I don't want to express an opinion about, though I have an opinion. One reason which has led to measures restricting the immigration of Chinese has been that they are not able to become citizens. It has not seemed wise to encourage the coming of persons to the United States who cannot take part in our [illegible], therefore have no active interest in our form of government. It may become well to place some restrictions upon all immigration. Perhaps it would be well to make provisions concerning the time of residence necessary as a preliminary to citizenship. When it cost $100 to come to the United States from Europe the immigrants generally represented industry, thrift and other qualities tending to fit them for good citizens of the United States. The conditions have changed somewhat. When it has been possible to get to this country for $8 we have unquestionably received undesirable immigrants. I believe that certain persons have been regularly engaged in collecting and shipping them to the United States. The spirit of our institutions and the principles which underlie the Declaration of Independence [illegible] by [illegible] who have not [illegible] in their own government."

THE [illegible]

[illegible] to the [illegible] of the Chinese question, Senator Stanford was asked concerning his views as to the probability of congressional action [illegible]. "We have [illegible]," he said, "[illegible] and enactments [illegible] without any [illegible]."

"What [illegible]?"

"What chance for passage would a proposition to [illegible] the treaty with China have in congress?"

"[illegible] trade would enter into that [illegible]. The conditions of trade are closely watched in the East. Measures to restrict Chinese immigration have been passed. They have given us that because it was represented as necessary. It is considered important to build up the trade of the country at large and the trade of the Pacific coast."

A WIFE MURDERER HANGED

LOS ANGELES, Nov 12—Albert G. Baynton, the murderer who killed his wife and also J. F. Hall, who attempted to protect her, on September [illegible], was hanged here to-day. He showed no signs of fear in ascending to the gallows, and remarked just before he was strapped and fastened that he was content to suffer the death penalty for his deeds and added that he thought the punishment he was about to undergo was too good for him.

Baynton preserved remarkable calmness and it was evident that from the beginning he had laid out his course and nerved himself for the end. He has been most tractable and obedient since his imprisonment. He has for a month past been visited daily by Rev. D. Birdsall, his spiritual advisor, and repeatedly professed repentance. His parting with his children this morning was very pathetic and affecting. They seemed to realize that the separation was final, and only as they clung to him and refused to be taken away by the Sister of Charity who had them in charge did his fortitude forsake him.

He arose at 6 o'clock this morning, and after a hearty breakfast was closeted with the minister until noon. He refused food at this time and signs of nervousness became more apparent.

Shortly after 1 Sheriff Gard entered Baynton's cell and read him the death warrant. The condemned man asked the sheriff to kneel down and pray with him. Mr. Gard complied.

At [illegible] o'clock the procession was formed [illegible]. Baynton [illegible] by the sheriff [illegible]. Deputy [illegible] black cap over Baynton's head [illegible]. "Yes," came the [illegible] trap was sprung.

Doubt and Mystery Still Surround the Chicago Strike.

PUGILISTS FIGHT TILL THEY FALL

Cameron and Lonsdale Fail to Rake in the American Dollars—Snowstorm in Ohio—Wife Murderer Hanged

CHICAGO, Nov 12—One small riot, promptly nipped in the bud, was all that occurred at the stock yards to-day to relieve the monotony of the strike. A hundred or so strikers attempted to tear in pieces the outfit of a recently engaged employe of Armour & Co., who was moving to a new place of residence. Some sheriff's deputies interfered before much damage was done, but a mob remained in the vicinity for some time, and at last accounts the unfortunate employe was still under protection of the sheriff's guards.

There is a large increase in the number of men at work and it would seem that in a few days the houses would have full gangs at work. One packer, [illegible] over a crowd of 1000 or more, remarked that the material was none of the best and would need considerable weeding out before it would be very serviceable. There is a crowd of colored people among the imported men.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Barry, Carleton, Marshal and Schilling was in session all morning at the Transit house. Numerous visitors were ushered upstairs to the room in which the committee sat, but no amount of inquiry could elicit any information. A new feature of the strike is the boycotting of Armour's meats by district assemblies 57 and [illegible] K. of L. A local boycott has been placed on Underwood & Co.

A SETTLEMENT PREDICTED.

[illegible] people are of the opinion that the stock yards strike will be settled before Monday. [illegible] that Armour knows more of the probabilities and possibilities of a settlement than any one. He to-day declined not to take any [illegible] until Monday, and it is this fact that gives color to the belief that the matter will be settled before that day.

Many rumors as to a settlement were in circulation, [illegible] could be confirmed. One report was that the proprietors of two of the smaller establishments had agreed to withdraw from the packers' association, and by taking their pick of the most skillful former employes, [illegible] Fowler and other leading packers at [illegible] to gain a prestige on that score as well as [illegible] house.

The strike leaders received and sent many telegrams during the day and evening, but absolutely declined to say a word as to whether or not the condition of affairs had been altered. In the afternoon Mr. Carleton, accompanied by Barry and the strikers' executive committee, left their headquarters ostensibly to call at the down town office of the packers. The packers denied that any such call was made.

BARRY AND CARLETON.

Late to-night Messrs. Barry and Carleton said that they had been working on a certain line, the [illegible] of which they were not at liberty to explain. Carleton admitted that he had an engagement to meet a member of the packers' association to-morrow, but said he had an idea that the meeting would be fruitless and that the packer merely wished to show that the employers' original plans had not been changed. Messrs. Barry and Carleton denied that they had been in conference with any of the packers, and intimated that their secret departure from the yards was merely a ruse to rid themselves of a swarm of reporters.

An opinion is general among well posted strikers that important instructions have been received from Powderly and that the leaders are engaged in shaping their policy to accord with the ideas of the general master workman.

MR. CLEVELAND AND HIS PARTY.

New York World. Dem.

Has Mr Cleveland strengthened himself with his party? The very things which have disappointed many republicans favorably, and the very reasons which commend the president to the republican voters and win for him the approval of the moneyed interests, tend to disappoint large numbers of democrats. We do not refer to the politician class or to the office seekers, but to men who are democrats upon principle, who believe that democracy should be something positively different from republicanism, and who are disappointed because the administration is not more positively and even aggressively democratic. The actual results of the change do not seem to them commensurate with the herculean effort which it cost to secure the change, nor with the expectations had in regard to it. They are disappointed at the attitude of indifference maintained by the president towards the connection of a member of his cabinet and several heads of important bureaus with the Pan-Electric scandal. As a practical [illegible] he has retained at the head of the department of justice, without a word of disapproval, a man who accepted as a gift a million or so of stock depending for its value upon the action of the government, and who was willing, to put it mildly, to profit privately from his "public trust." They are disappointed that the first democratic administration in nearly a quarter of century should have pursued so peculiar a policy as to have absolutely no influence in shaping or stimulating new, reformatory legislation for the benefit of the country, although its party holds control of the popular branch of congress.

Three-fourths of the offices are still in possession of the republicans, many rascals have not been turned out, the "opening of the books" has not been followed by investigation of the past and the disclosure of startling dishonesty which it is believed that a thorough examination would disclose, and, in brief, little has been done that was promised and less of what was expected. People complain that the president has had no fixed policy, but has been variable and fluctuating. He has sublet his financial policy to Wall street. He has sublet civil service reform in this city and Massachusetts to independents, while farming out the patronage as spoils to the politicians and "workers" in other states where the senatorial "bosses" had to be pleased and reform has few supporters. He has treated as equally deserving of his favor the men who supported and those who opposed an effort to redeem the party's pledge to "revise the tariff in a spirit of fairness to all interests," as a means of abating needless war taxes and preventing a gigantic surplus. These are but a few of the complaints made against Mr. Cleveland by thinking, intelligent, independent democrats. We are not now considering their justice. We simply note that they exist.

The very fact that the mugwump press lauds him in about the proportion that it abuses the democratic party prejudices many democrats against him. "How can he be a democrat," they ask, "while seeking adulation at the expense of his party?" However strong the president may be in Galveston or Little Rock, in this state it is certain that the most active element of the party, outside of the office holding and specially favored class, is not better pleased with Mr. Cleveland's course than when so many of its members acquiesced unwillingly in his candidacy, and others, in dangerous numbers, declined to vote for him.

STRANGE STORY OF THE PLAINTIFF

LONDON, Nov 12—The Sebright divorce case was brought up for preliminary hearing to-day. Action is brought by Mrs. Arthur Sebright, who asked to have her marriage declared void on the grounds that she was induced to consent to have the ceremony performed by fear and that the marriage has never been consummated.

Plaintiff is a daughter of Lady Scott of Southampton, and is noted for her beauty. Defendant is a well known London club man. Plaintiff's friends assert that defendant, coveting her private fortune of $200,000, managed to inveigle her into financial transactions which finally fell upon her for settlement at a time when she had to choose between refusing to pay and be compromised or escaping by marriage to defendant and permitting him to liquidate.

At the hearing to-day Mrs. Sebright's counsel admitted the marriage, which he said was performed at the registrar's last January. He contended, however, that no marital relation had ever taken place, that the parties had never lived together, and that there has been no impropriety in the financial transaction which caused their marriage. Mr. Sebright had induced petitioner to accept certain bills, and she had been led to believe that a marriage ceremony between herself and respondent would relieve her of the financial liability incurred.

THE JUDGE'S DECISION.

The judge said he thought that under these circumstances it would be impossible to nullify the marriage and announced that he would hear testimony with a view to deciding if there was sufficient reason to grant a divorce.

Mrs. Sebright was called to the witness stand, and sworn. She testified that through her father she had inherited in her own name $130,600, in addition to a reversion of $150,000 on the death of her mother. She had met Mr. Sebright when she was but 16 years of age and an acquaintance had been continuous. He proposed marriage to her after they had been acquainted a short time only, but her mother declined to permit an engagement. Mr. Sebright continued his visits to the house, however, and was received on terms of friendship. Finally Mr. Sebright induced witness to engage herself to him in marriage unknown to her mother. After this he persuaded her from time to time to sign "bits of paper" which he supplied. Eventually witness ascertained that she had appended her name to notes and bills and had made herself liable for sums amounting to $16,625. When they were served upon her she appealed to Sebright. He said the only way in which she could save herself from ruin was by marrying him. This, witness said, she refused to do.

THE MARRIAGE.

Mr. Sebright next requested witness to meet him [illegible] and she did so. He took her to a place unknown to her, but which she learned was a registry office. She wished to leave the room the moment she found where she was. Count Balharney, a friend of Sebright, who was present, blocked the door and Sebright said to her that he would shoot her if she dared to show that she was not acting with free will in the marriage which he was about to have performed between them. He then forced a ring on her finger and witness threw it off and again tried to leave the room. Sebright seized her by the arm and forced her back and made her sign the register.

Witness said she did not hear the registrar read the form of marriage, nor hear him say anything. "I was too upset and too dreadfully frightened," she declared, "to hear anything at the time."

The registrar being sworn deposed that when Mrs. Sebright was before him she was agitated, but she repeated the marriage declarations without any hesitation and also the marriage form when Sebright took her hand. Witness added that subsequently the lady threw the marriage ring on the floor but signed the registry without hesitation or demurring.

Lady Scott, Mrs. Sebright's mother, and two doctors testified that petitioner was completely broken down mentally and physically after the ceremony, and was always tremulous and crying and in constant terror.

ENGLAND.

THE UNEMPLOYED OF LONDON.

LONDON, Nov 12—The local government board has made public its reply to the letter recently addressed to it by the social democratic federation, calling attention to the alleged enormous increase of the number of poor and unemployed in London. The board's reply asserts that in the month of October, 1886, the percentage of paupers in London was twenty two to every thousand of population, while in the same month of the year 1878 the percentage was forty two to the thousand, and argues that these figures prove that if pauperism does increase in London the government will be quite able to manage it and its attendant evils. The board promises to assist the local authorities in the work of relieving the poor.

ENORMOUS DAMAGE FROM STORMS.

LONDON, Nov 13—A dispatch from Genoa says the floods have caused enormous damage in that region. The railways at Ventimiglia appear to have suffered severely. The body has not been found.

The king and queen of Wurtemburg, who were traveling to Lyons, were detained a whole night at Ventimiglia.

The note also proposes reforms in the financial administration of Egypt. The proposals are supported by the porte. It is expected that Prince Bismarck will acquiesce.

GREAT DAMAGE FROM FLOODS.

PARIS, Nov 12—The city of Nice has been visited by enormous waves from the Mediterranean which swept away quays and promenades. On the Anglais plantation upwards of 100 people were carried off their feet, and the quays and promenade covered with sand. The devastation wrought by the waves extends two miles along Nice's water front.

At Cannes, which is twenty five miles from Nice, a fierce storm has been raging, and two vessels are known to be wrecked. Men standing on the quays were carried out to sea on immense waves. The Croisset promenade was destroyed.

A rain amounting to almost a deluge, has been falling for four days at Gap, capital of the department of Hautes Alpes. A number of houses have been utterly destroyed by floods, resulting from the water fall.

The Oregonian.

PORTLAND, SATURDAY, NOV. 13, 1886.

NO POSSIBLE PARALLEL.

The Voice, national organ of the prohibition party, asks leave to submit "a calm word." It takes notice of the complaints made throughout the country here and there that candidates of fair record were defeated and those of bad record elected through the action of the prohibitionists; it remarks that this fact has filled some excellent people with sadness or caused them to "feel hurt;" and then it attempts to apply the balm of philosophy to their sore or sorrowing minds. This it does by saying:

> There is no possible way to bring a new party—a party of moral ideas—to the front without the defeat and the destruction of the better one of the two old parties. The new party must attract to itself the best elements in the old parties, and of necessity the party which contains the more of this element will suffer the more. This was true of the old whig party. Out of its grave sprang the republican party. Had not the whig party died, the republican party had failed and Lincoln had never been president. Either the prohibition party will never come to the front or the republican party must give way to it.

There is no great need of grief for the death of a party; for a party will not die so long as there is work for it to do, and if there is no work which it is fitted to do it may better be dead. The republican, therefore, who regards party as an instrument to be used for certain ends and objects of a public character, not as an idol to be worshiped, isn't filled with grief by the declaration of the prohibitionist that the republican party is to be destroyed. These things take their own natural course. A political party can live, as an active, potential, guiding force, no longer than it has a right to live.

But there are errors in the prohibition organ's reasoning which should be corrected in the interest of truth, without reference to partisan interest. There is a persistent effort to force a parallel between the present position of the republican party in relation to the liquor question and the position of the old whig party in relation to slavery; and to show, moreover, that what happened to the whig party because it would not declare for abolition of slavery, is just what must happen to the republican party because it will not declare for abolition of the liquor trade. But the conditions are all different, primarily because the questions are totally different. At no point is there a likeness between the trade in men and the trade in liquors, and forced analogies only serve to emphasize the total dissimilarity.

The whig party did not die because it would not declare for abolition of slavery, nor did the republican party come into life and power declaring for abolition. The whig party was abandoned because it did not take the reasonable and constitutional position that slavery should not be extended into the free territories; or rather, it would be more accurate to say that when the whig party died this demand of the country had not yet been fully formulated. As this idea began to take form, the republican party grew into life and power, and it elected Lincoln, not on an abolition platform, but on a platform expressly pledging the party not to interfere with slavery where it existed, but simply to resist the extension of slavery over the free territories of the United States. Had it declared for abolition of slavery it never would have come into power. It was the folly and madness of the slaveholders themselves that abolished slavery; the republicans never could have touched that "peculiar institution."

Now, though there is no parallel whatever between the trade in men and the trade in liquors, nor ever can be, it may be remarked that the position which the prohibitionists want the republican party to take would defeat it as a national party as utterly and hopelessly as the same party would have been defeated in 1860 had it inscribed abolition on its banners. Slavery, though it now has no defenders and is a crime in the judgment of all civilized men, was abolished at last by force of arms and against the will of a great majority of the people of the United States—for the South certainly didn't want it abolished, the Northern democracy resisted abolition to the last, and these two forces made a large majority of the American people. But, by keeping the South out of congress and under military government, and beating the Northern democrats in the elections—though this last was very difficult in many states—the anti-slavery amendment was forced into the constitution.

This is the history of the abolition of slavery. Nothing could be more fatuous than the supposition that the methods by which slavery was abolished can afford any guide or parallel for abolition of the trade in liquors, for there can be no similarity, likeness, resemblance or analogy whatever. Since the two things differ so entirely in principle, and since the attitude of men towards them is so wholly different, every attempt at comparison or analogy is misleading. Neither the fate of parties nor the course of politics on the one question can be deduced from the fate of parties or the course of politics on the other.

But it is quite needless to go into these disquisitions, except for the purpose of getting rid of a delusion that obstructs practical views of the subject. There is one simple fact that the political prohibitionist chooses to overlook, yet is decisive, viz: Every person, or almost every one, regards himself as quite as competent to decide for himself when and what he is to drink as to decide when and what he is to eat, or what he is to put on. Some may be wrong in this judgment, but they don't think so; and a great majority are likely always to hold to it.

OUR GLORIOUS FALL.

Our fall has indeed been "glorious," but, like most glorious things, it has had its "other side." Farmers complain that, excepting in a few localities, the ground has been too dry to plow. A farmer living near Dixie, in Polk county, informs us that he has been waiting for a month to set a line of fence, the ground being so hard that it has not been possible to bore post-holes. Such a condition has not been known in his neighborhood since the settlement of the country. From all parts of the Willamette valley come similar reports. In the Columbia river basin the dry season has been felt less seriously, owing to the softer quality of the soil; but there, as in Western Oregon, the farmers are and have for a month been hoping eagerly for more rain. Naturally the work of plowing, planting and the like is backward throughout the country. This does not imply anything like agricultural distress. It merely postpones the business of seeding till late fall, much of it probably till next spring. There has been sufficient rain to make pasturage fine, so that stock is really better off than usual at this time of year.

As a consequence of the long dry season, the Willamette and lower Columbia rivers are lower than they have ever before been known to be. At the present time and for two weeks past the United States engineer's gauge has shown the level to be a foot below low water mark. Notwithstanding this fact shipping has suffered no delay to speak of. The San Francisco steamers come and go as usual on schedule time and with the regularity of railroad trains. This fact is stated especially for the benefit of those Puget sound journals which suffer so much uneasiness on behalf of Portland and the Columbia river ship channels.

Maj. Jones who has charge of the river channels has made fine use of the long season of low water to rid the upper Willamette of snags and other obstructions. The snagpuller has ranged the river up and down and has accomplished more effective work than could have been done in many months with the river at its higher stages. The importance of this work is very well stated by the Corvallis Gazette, which in its issue of yesterday remarks: "It is to the interest of the people of the valley that the river be kept in a navigable condition, for while it can in no sense compete fully with railroads, it maintains the rights of a people on a highway that is unpurchasable, and leaves them always a loop hole by which they can escape the extortion of monopolies. The halcyon days of steamboating on the upper Willamette have passed, and it is not to the interest of the state that they should ever return. But it is to the interest of the people that the river be kept in such condition that boats will be able to do such business as is from time to time required; that railroad companies may not have a practical ownership of the entire transportation facilities of the valley."

To dwellers in towns and others to whom the weather in its many moods is simply a consideration of personal comfort, the season has been a supreme delight. The crimson and gold of autumn have been richer than usual, and with the fresh green of the valleys, the deep blue of the distant hills, and the gleaming white of the mountain hights, have shone with unaccustomed splendor in a light glorious with the brilliance of summer but without its heat. In these rare days all the charms of all the seasons have been combined and set off by an environment, the like of which can not be found in any other country than this of Oregon.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR IT.

Poor Fred Winkleman! At last the "boy murderer" is released from a world in which, with all his faults and crimes, he was more sinned against than sinning. He came from irresponsible parentage, grew up without care or instruction, lived now he could, was starved in his moral nature as well as his body, knew nothing of the tender sympathies of life, never got into harmonious relations with the world he was born into, was treated unjustly, blindly resented the treatment without regard to moral or legal restraints, of which he knew nothing, or of consequences which he had not sufficient intelligence to foresee, and after a year and a half of dreadful suffering has died for it. A man owed him money; he drove off the man's horses, which was theft; two men came upon him whom he supposed to be pursuing him, and, as quick with rifle as stupid in moral nature and perception of legal consequences, he shot him dead. Arrested and put in jail, he began to realize his liability to the law and perhaps the nature of his offense, and he attempted suicide by firing the jail, but was rescued after being horribly burned. His sufferings gradually broke down his poor stock of mentality, and after he was sent to the penitentiary he was transferred to the asylum for the insane, where he continued to make attempts, in his poor feeble way, to get rid of the curse of existence. At last he is called away. Such a case is a spectacle to move the pity of all who have hearts. Not that there is in this pity any thought that he was dealt with harshly by the law, for the law was lenient to his youth and inexperience; but there is in it a feeling that the boy was brought into the world and lived in it under conditions that afforded him no protection from his tendency to thoughtless and criminal folly, but, on the contrary, drove him on pitilessly to a pitiful fate. There is responsibility for all this, and in the day of God's judgment surely it will not fall wholly on the head of this poor erring boy!

THE SUGAR DUTIES.

The nation is taxed some $52,000,000 annually on sugar, duties that are a direct tax on the consumer, for which there is no more argument than there would be for taxing tea and coffee. Very little of the sugar we consume is produced in the United States, and despite the heavy federal bounty in shape of the sugar tax, less sugar is produced by Louisiana to-day than in the day of low tariff before the war, showing that protection has not stimulated and increased native production. In 1850 Louisiana produced 226,000 hogsheads of sugar, in 1885 but 220,000 hogsheads, and the estimate for this year is but 187,000 hogsheads. The figures for other years are 1870, but 80,000; 1880, but 187,000. Last year we consumed 3,050,000,000 pounds of sugar, of which but one-eleventh part was produced in the United States. In spite of the enormous tax and the vast increase in consumption, Louisiana produces less than she did in 1850, eleven years before the war tax was laid. The amount of the sugar tax last year, $52,000,000, is equivalent to nearly 19 cents per pound upon 280,000,000 pounds of domestic cane sugar consumed in the United States. Is there any reason why the whole nation should pay a tax of 19 cents a pound upon the sugar production of Louisiana in order to enable the sugar planters of that state to make a crop which they market for about 5 cents a pound? New Jersey pays a state bounty for every pound of sorghum sugar raised within her borders. Let Louisiana do likewise and save the nation over $50,000,000. The production of cotton has increased wonderfully under free labor, and sugar can also be produced more cheaply under free labor. Louisiana would raise just as much sugar to-day if the duties were entirely removed.

The Indianapolis Sentinel, chief democratic organ of Indiana, declares that the loss of that state by the democrats in the late election was due to disgust of the Indiana democrats with the president and his policy. After saying that it "has no hesitancy in laying at the door of Mr. Cleveland responsibility for the misfortune that has overtaken the party," the Sentinel proceeds:

> We may look upon the result as a rebuke. The un-American policy he has pursued in dealing with the party and the partisans that elected him to office is the direct cause of the apathy of the party in so many sections of the country. He has done all he could to destroy the party organization. He has chilled the honorable ambition of young men and grievously abused the old leaders, and in doing these things he has incurred not only their dissatisfaction, but the contempt of all manly republicans.

Nevertheless, if Mr. Cleveland had given the country an out-and-out spoils administration, can any rational man suppose that his party would be in better condition than it now is to contest the next presidential election?

The failure of the Cameron-Lonsdale "outfit" in New York, reported by telegraph, is a sign of social advancement. These people came with the distinct purpose of turning a social and moral scandal to financial account. It is a thing to be ashamed of that their scheme was not without some basis. Others coming before them had profited by unsavory reputation, and the story had gone forth in England that nasty notoriety, the nastier the better, was useful in America as an advertisement. They have failed utterly, and in their failure America has done herself credit. This ought to have a wholesome effect upon the American stage. If it is once understood that decency of character as well as talent is requisite to popularity there will be fewer stage scandals; or at least we shall hear less of them.

Some days ago a general purchasing agent in this city received an order from Josephine county for a barrel of packed butter. As Josephine county lies in one of the best grass regions in the state, and is known to be rich in cattle, the agent was greatly surprised. He set out to make the purchase however, and again was surprised to find that there was not a single barrel of packed butter for sale in this city. All this illustrates a fine state of industry.

It is probable that the number of miles of railroad built this year in the United States will equal the total of the years 1884 and 1885. The Railway Age reports 5439 miles of new line already made this year, and grading and other preliminary operations in such a stage of progress that a total of 7000 miles is quite sure to be reached. In 1884 the total miles of new road were 3825, and in 1885, 3131.

Randall, it is said, will not be a candidate for the speakership of the next congress. He will support James N. Burnes, of Missouri, a close personal friend, who shares his tariff views. This is the way the Washington specials now have it.

$500 Not Called For.

It seems strange that it is necessary to persuade men that you can cure their diseases by offering a premium to the man who fails to receive benefit. And yet Dr. Sage undoubtedly cured thousands of cases of obstinate catarrh with his "Catarrh Remedy" who would never have applied to him if it had not been for his offer of the above sum for an incurable disease. Who is the next bidder for cure or cash?

The democratic party is the only political party in this country whose chief corner-stone was the master and slave. It is the same old democratic party to-day, and the masters who held the whip before the war hold it now.—Detroit Tribune.

In these modified forms of proposals the width of iron proposed will be stated in the bids, and a copy of this advertisement will be attached to each bid.

The proposals will be endorsed on the outside of the sealed envelope, "Proposals for Construction of Water Works," and addressed to Philip C. Schuyler, clerk of the Water Committee, Portland, Oregon.

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

HOW JOE WAS SWINDLED.—The thirty counterfeit dollars paid to the Indian Joe for his horse and for passing which F. Krause was tried Thursday, were on exhibition in the U. S. marshal's office yesterday. They were very poorly executed, being evidently composed of lead principally. They were not nearly such artistic looking coins as the dollars made by Etheredge, who was quite an artist in that line. Joe, who was swindled out of his horse, is a fine looking Indian and was one of the Warm Spring scouts who took part in the Modoc war and assisted in capturing Capt. Jack. Joe did not want to sell his horse and he particularly hated to part with his saddle, which was a very good one for lassoing cattle from, but the perfidious white man tempted him with the glittering [illegible] bogus dollars and with reckless extravagance, as it appeared to Joe, raised his offer higher and higher till it was made $30. Indian flesh and blood could stand it no longer. Even stolid old Friday said: "If you ever want to sell your horse now is the time," and Joe took the big stack of bogus dollars and parted with his horse and saddle. Some one made those dollars and if Krause did not he probably knows who did. He will do well in future to keep out of bad company.

FOUND GUILTY.—The case of the United States against Miles S. Dean, charged with attempting to use postage stamps a second time, was tried in the U. S. circuit court yesterday. Dean resides at Wilderville, Josephine county. He is a school teacher and a sort of immigration board on a small scale. It seems that he advertised in Eastern papers that he would answer communications making inquiries as to the natural resources of this state, the advantages it offered to emigrants, etc. He received many letters, sometimes 100 to 150 per day. These letters contained stamps for the reply. When Dean was detected in using these stamps, which had marks on them as if they had been canceled, he claimed that he had received them in this way. But a witness testified that Dean told him that he knew of a way of removing the marks from stamps so that they could be used a second time. This is what probably decided the matter, for the jury were only out a few minutes when they brought in a verdict of guilty. The penalty is a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500, or by imprisonment for not less than six months nor more than a year, or both.

OVERLAND TO CALIFORNIA.—On and after Sunday next the time occupied in making the overland trip from Portland to San Francisco or vice versa will be two and a half days. On that day the Southern Pacific Railroad company's trains will begin running to McCloud's siding, 308 miles from San Francisco. Passengers bound south will leave Portland at 8 o'clock A. M. daily except Sunday, arriving at Ashland at 4 the next morning. The stage will leave Ashland going south at 5 A. M. and arrive at McCloud's, 85 miles distant, at 10:30 P. M. the same day. The train will leave McCloud's at 6 the following morning. Passengers arriving in the evening can secure berths in the sleeping car the same evening at McCloud's. The Southern Pacific Railroad company will run a sleeping car through to Redding, arriving there at 3 A. M. This will enable passengers to sleep in the car from the evening of the arrival at McCloud's until breakfast time next morning at [illegible] A. M. San Francisco will be reached at [illegible] M. the same day.

GOT OFF EASY.—At 11:30 o'clock Thursday night policeman Belcher arrested Frank Hardy on board the steamer on a warrant charging him with obtaining money under false pretenses. Hardy was at one time a waiter in the Vienna restaurant. As the story goes, on September the first he went to A. S. Foster, purser of the steamer Manzanillo, and presented a bill from Franklin & Wittenberg, bakers on Third street, for $15, saying Mr. Franklin had instructed him to collect it. The money was paid, Hardy receipting for it. It subsequently came out that he had no authority to make any such collection, hence the complaint and arrest. Hardy was admitted to cash bail in the sum of $[illegible]0 and yesterday when his case was called in the police court he failed to appear and the $[illegible]0 was declared forfeited. It is understood Hardy settled the matter with Foster and has gone East to his parents. Hardy is but [illegible]0 years of age.

IMPERCEPTIBLE IMPROVEMENT.—"Morrison street between First and Fourth is now covered with a fine coating of mud, the result of the late improvement," said a member of the street committee yesterday, while looking over it. "There is a sample of what rock screenings amount to. The taxpayers would raise a howl if the street had been dressed up with clay, but it would have made a better and more permanent improvement. They will pay for putting on this powdered rock and then pay the street department for scraping it up and hauling it off again. From present appearances the sooner it is scraped up and hauled off the better for the street, especially at Third and Morrison, are in a dreadful condition."

WAGON WRECKED.—A man engaged in hauling ties out between Carmine and Fairview had a narrow escape on Wednesday. As he was crossing the railroad track the Eastern bound express came along around a curve and struck the rear end of his wagon, a [illegible] red and yellow painted one, completely wrecking the vehicle and rolling him over and over along the ground. The horses, freed from their load, ran away while he was picking himself up. The train backed up long enough to see that no one was killed and then proceeded. There are a number of persons hauling out railroad ties in that vicinity and they have made a lot of temporary crossings over the line, which accounts for the accident.

BIG BAG OF CANVAS BACKS.—The first good killing of canvasback was made on Wednesday by M. O. Lownsdale, S. G. Reed, J. W. Whalley and Jack Knott at Greene's lake, W. T. They shot from 8 A. M. to 3 P. M. and bagged eighty canvas backs and about the same number of trash ducks—mallard and widgeon. The party found about 1500 canvasback feeding in the lake. The other wapato lakes are yet so low that but few canvas visit them. The outlet to Greene's lake was dammed early in the season and consequently there is quite a depth of water there. The building of this dam was a —— smart trick.

SENTENCED AND SENT UP.—Wm. Etheredge and James Blagg, convicted of counterfeiting, came up for sentence in the U. S. circuit court yesterday. Judge Deady, after stating that they had had a fair trial and been faithfully and ably defended by their counsel, James A. Campbell and D. R. Murphy, sentenced Etheredge to confinement in the penitentiary for three years and Blagg for one year, and each to pay a fine of $1. The prisoners were taken to Salem last evening by Deputy Marshal Marquam.

EXCLUSIVE SHOOTING PRIVILEGE.—The decree of Judge Stearns in the case of H. T. Bingham and J. W. Bingham vs. Charles Saline and wife provided that the Binghams, A. P. Ankeny and Boss Schenck have the exclusive right to shoot on Saline's ranch on Willamette slough and the Salines have no right to extend the privilege to any one else. In accordance with this decree hunters had better take notice that there are no ducks for them to shoot on the above mentioned premises.

THREATENED TO KILL HIS WIFE.—Thursday morning P. J. Sullivan was arrested for drunkenness and yesterday was fined for the same in the police court. After court adjourned Mary Sullivan, wife of the defendant, who keeps a lodging house on B street, had Sullivan rearrested on two charges—one of threatening to kill and another assaulting and beating her. In default of bail the accused was locked up pending his trial to-day.

[illegible] ENGINE.—The monster locomotive for the N. P. R. R. Co. to be used on the switchback over the Cascades arrived at Sprague Wednesday evening. It has ten wheels and weighs in working order 31,000 pounds. The cylinders are [illegible] inches in diameter and [illegible] inch stroke. This machine is an own brother to the one that butted the bull off the bridge.

ALLEGED WITTICISMS.—A wag when told yesterday that the supreme court had sustained the legality of the water committee, replied: "It is evident that the bill creating the water committee wasn't made to hold water." On being told that the Balch case had been decided by the supreme court against the orphans, he replied: "Oh, that was decided last June by [illegible] majority."

UNJUST JUSTICES.—[illegible] report is to the effect that the investigation by the present county judge of the bills returned by justices' courts for several years past discloses the fact that numerous cases have been sent in that never were, in other words fictitious. The grand jury, it is said, has been informed of the fact and may take some action in the matter.

DIED IN HOSPITAL.—Several days ago Mrs. Carroll, who has for some time past kept a cigar and confectionery store on North First, was taken to St. Vincent's hospital suffering from paralysis. Yesterday word was received that she had died. She was a widow and kept a store at the lower end of town for some years.

CORRECT ENTERPRISE.—Eastern representatives of prominent firms who are constantly among us have expressed themselves as greatly surprised at the growth of our business and the advance made by merchants to meet the demand of people in supplying lines of goods that will serve to please customers. In this particular we will take occasion to mention the house of Wiberg & Hollaugh, who some months ago took possession of Meyer's block, First and Washington, in order to better accommodate their growing trade and enable them to introduce in a better manner the many new and fine lines of boots and shoes which are fast supplanting old and cumbersome styles. Among the excellent makes introduced are those of Laird, Schober & Mitchell's fine goods. In fact in all lines of men's, youths', ladies' and children's foot wear this firm carries everything that will certainly please the wearer.

THE BALCH CASE

An Outline Sketch of a Case Long in the Courts, Involving a Great Fortune

The late decision of the supreme court in the "Balch case," as it is commonly called, has caused considerable comment and many of our citizens who are not counted among the "old residents" would like to know something about the matter. It is a long story, nearly as long as the Mississippi river and with nearly as many crooks and turns in it.

To put it in a smaller compass and to state it so that it will suit all connected with it is rather a difficult task, but an outline sketch may be attempted which, while giving an idea of the case, will not be minute enough in details to be objectionable to anybody.

About thirty-six years ago one Danford Balch settled on a claim, then in the dense forest, but now in the northwest corner of the city. He had a wife and nine children. He built a house, cleared off some twenty acres, planted an orchard and occupied himself in hunting. Among those who sometimes hunted with him was one Mortimer Stump, who became smitten with Balch's eldest daughter and wished to marry her. Balch said the girl was too young to marry, but if Stump would wait till she was of a proper age and then if both were of mind to wed he would make no objections. He warned Stump that if he eloped with the girl he would be shot. Stump did run away with the girl and Balch, meeting him on the Stark street ferry boat, shot him dead. In his last statement he said the gun went off by accident. He was arrested, tried and hanged on the 17th of October, 1859, about nine years after he had settled on his claim. While Balch was in jail he divided his claim with his wife, giving her the east half as the most valuable. It is probable that he intended to take up 640 acres, but when Mrs. Balch received the patent it only covered about 346 acres. In his last statement made to the clergyman and published in THE OREGONIAN, with an account of his hanging, he said: "I have great solicitude about my children. It is my desire that my wife should deed her part of the claim to the children, renting it in the meantime for her and their support."

Accordingly on the day Balch was buried Mrs. Balch made a deed conveying her half of the claim, 1[illegible] acres, to the eight children living with her, the widow of Stump, who had attended the execution of her father, with the Stump family, being omitted from the deed.

This deed was never recorded and was probably afterward destroyed, but it was seen by parties who testified to its having been in existence. In 1866 Mrs. Balch deeded this tract again to John A. Confer and the same day, December 8, married him. Shortly after this one Morell, who had married the widow Stump, commenced suit against Mrs. Confer to set aside the deed she had given to Confer and establish the deed previously made by her conveying the land to her eight children.

Confer employed Dolph & Mitchell to defend his interests and deeded them half of his land for so doing. The circuit court decided in favor of Confer, but the case was carried to the supreme court and reversed and the eight children received their own, that is, it was decided that Mrs. Confer had a life interest in the land and it was to go to her eight children at her death.

When four of the eight children had come of age they deeded their interest in the fee of the land to different parties, two of the eighths finally coming to Max Goldsmith and the other two to Louis Goldsmith, who still own them, and they have always remained in peaceable possession thereof, and thus half of Mr. Balch's claim has not been involved in the Balch case since that time.

Mr. Dolph about this time cleared himself of all connection, it seems, with the case or the property. In 1868 Confer and Mrs. Confer petitioned the county court to appoint a guardian for the four children still owning an interest in the land in order that it might be sold and the proceeds appropriated to the maintenance and education of these children. Two years after C. S. Silver was appointed guardian of the children. Within a very brief space appraisers were appointed, an inventory made and all the necessary legal forms gone through, and the half of the tract belonging to the four children sold. It was purchased by J. H. Mitchell, who acted as Confer's legal adviser, for $750. The disposition made of this money is rather a delicate subject to handle, but it seems it was ostensibly used to pay a bill Confer had made up for supporting and educating the children amounting to $[illegible]384. Confer swore afterward that he received only $1000 of the money. So Mitchell became possessed of half of Mrs. Balch's tract, and what the children were to do for future maintenance and education was a conundrum. But having obtained the land, Mitchell did not appear to care for it, as on the day he received his title he deeded it to B. Goldsmith for a consideration of $17,000. Mr. Goldsmith deeded it to P. Wasserman and Wasserman deeded it to Joe Teal. Then the children, who it seems began to imagine they had been swindled, began to take steps toward trying to recover this land, and Mr. Teal brought suit to quiet his title to it. The day after he commenced the suit, however, he deeded to Solomon Goldsmith three of the four-eighths which he owned and Solomon deeded them to Louis Goldsmith. Teal was beaten in the supreme court and the children's title quieted as against him and his successors. Then the four children commenced a suit for a division of the land, when Louis Goldsmith came in and claimed three fourths of it through his deed from Teal to Solomon Goldsmith. After tedious litigation the late decision of the supreme court has confirmed him in possession and all that is left to the children and their successors, commonly known in the case as "the orphans," is the one-eighth of their mother's claim which Teal, unfortunately as it appears for himself, did not deed away. The only one of the Balch family now on the old tract is the woman whose haste to wed caused all this trouble and who, being long since divorced from her second husband, is now living happily with her third. Of Mrs. Balch's claim five-eighths are now owned by Louis Goldsmith, two-eighths by Max Goldsmith and one-eighth by the orphans, the child of Balch now on the claim owning one tenth of that eighth.

The value of this half of the original Balch claim is now probably $450,000, and the whole of what was patented to Balch and his wife must be worth well on toward half a million.

MEMBERS' RECEPTION AT Y. M. C. A.

The members' reception for the month of November took place last evening in Y. M. C. A. hall. A large number of young men were in attendance with their lady friends.

The meeting opened at 8 o'clock with Mr. C. F. Beal, chairman of the social reception committee, in the chair. Mr. J. R. Baldwin was chosen secretary pro tem. A paper was read by Mr. R. I. Warner, giving a description of the new building of the Harlem branch association, and a paper on Social Work by Mr. A. M. Smith, Jr. Mr. I. L. Beach, chairman of the membership committee, reported an accession of 31 members, 44 being active and 17 associate. The average age of those becoming members is 23. [illegible] are clerks and salesmen, 24 mechanics, 20 students, 12 professional men, 6 business men, 4 collectors, 4 apprentices, 2 farmers. The report of the general secretary was very encouraging, all departments of the work being better attended than any previous year. A vocal duet by Messrs. Beal and Collyn was well received; also a violin solo with piano accompaniment by Mr. A. Dobbins and J. W. Collyn. Mr. John M. Wells and Mr. H. I. Morton, who were the successful competitors in disposing of course tickets to the members' entertainments, both received as prizes elegant solid gold association badges.

THE EAST SIDE.

STEAM WOOD SAWING MACHINE WRECKED.

About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon a man in charge of John Paine's steam wood sawing machine was taking it down I street from Fourth to the corner of Third street to commence a job of wood sawing for Mr. Preston, whose residence is near the bank of the slough just south of the long bridge. Upon arriving at the place the driver attempted to back the machine a little to the north and in doing so the hind wheels went a little too far and the machine ran over the bank and tumbled into the slough, breaking it all to pieces. The driver, who was walking by the side of the horse and had hold of the bridle at the time, was obliged to let go to save himself, but the horse was dragged about half way down the bank, when the shafts broke and the animal was saved by lodging against some trees. Parties near by who witnessed the accident ran to the place and soon had the horse up the bank and apparently uninjured. The machine and saw are broken to pieces and at the bottom of the slough.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.

SHIPPING NOTES.

The German wooden ship Carl Friedrich, 2238 tons, recently accepted a wheat charter from San Francisco to Liverpool, Havre or Antwerp at 21s 3d. In October, last year, she accepted 22s 6d to Liverpool, the rates in both instances being about the lowest of each season. The Carl Friedrich was formerly the American ship Red Cloud.

Br ship Titania, from San Francisco August 5, is reported as arrived at Falmouth the 5th inst. in the remarkable time of ninety-four days. The Titania is an old tea clipper and has a fine sailing record.

The electric light at Hell Gate having proved disadvantageous to the navigation of the channel, they will discontinue it December 1. The objections were that upon approaching it the effect was very dazzling, and upon leaving it the darkness appeared the more intense by contrast. The objections to lighting the Bartholdi statue are less serious, it being in a very different situation, especially as the light there would be supplemented by many smaller lights nearer the level of the water.

The New York Maritime Register of recent date prints a hurricane chart of the north Atlantic, showing the tracks of tropical cyclones or storms for forty years. Accompanying it is a list of storms to the number of 476 and covering a period of 387 years. The first noted was in 1493. The locality visited by each storm and the date of occurrence is given up to 1855. The chart and the list is the work of John P. Finley, of the United States signal corps, the data being obtained from records of land stations and logs of vessels. The monthly frequency of storms shows 95 in August, 94 in September, 75 in October, 41 in July, 15 in November, 12 in March, 10 in June, 8 in December and 4 to 6 in the other months.

The last survey of the Columbia river bar shows an increase in the depth of water of one foot. The channel is straighter and better than shown by old surveys. Altogether there is material improvement and the condition of the bar was never better.

Steam schooner Laguna in crossing out from Tillamook 2d inst. struck on bar and broke propeller blade and carried away shoe.

Capt. Jarvis of the British ship Earl of Dalhousie, thinks the San Francisco stevedores work too much for their own convenience. On the passage his ship met a heavy gale which shifted cargo. Although all the shifting boards stood, he says the cargo was so poorly stored that it required fully sixty tons moved from one side to the other to right the vessel. He claims the bags should be stowed in lengthwise and not athwart.

To Err is Human

But it is positively inexcusable to administer or take narcotics or potent sedatives to relieve intranquility of the nerves, the easily discoverable cause of which is simply indigestion. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the remedy indicated when the nervous system is weak, and consequently supersensitive and untranquil. Braced and quieted by this superlative tonic, the system obtains needful repose at night, dyspeptic qualms cease to disturb the stomach, and mental inquietude disappears. The habit of body becomes regular, the liver and kidneys are healthfully stimulated, and bodily or mental exertion ceases to be a wearisome and difficult task. Neuralgia, rheumatism and malarial disorders, and kidney troubles, are entirely eradicated by this matchless invigorant and regulator.

A Significant Confession.

New York Mail and Express.

The World says that if "it shall turn out that the democrats have lost control of the house they will at least be in better condition for the next presidential canvass through being relieved of the responsibility of legislation." This is a remarkable tribute to the party to which our esteemed contemporary has been faithful for more than a quarter of a century. The World speaks the solemn truth. The democratic party is most popular when it is out of power. It is weak when it is in command, because it is unworthy of responsibility. The World's congratulations on defeat are grim, but we fancy, unconscious irony. The democratic party must hide its weaknesses by getting into a minority, in order that it may have any chance of future success.

GOOD FARMING PAYS.

PORTLAND, Or., Nov. 9, 1886.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

The standard of farming in Oregon is not high, but it is improving every year. The increased yield secured by careful cultivation demonstrates that it pays, and this is the spur that is breaking up many of the slipshod and careless methods that have prevailed so largely among the average farming communities in our state. A single incident is given in illustration, and it is only one of many of similar kind, which go to prove that in farming, as well as every other occupation, "whatever is worth doing at all, is worth doing well." The following came under the writer's observation four years ago: A tract of seventy acres of farming land in Yamhill county, near Dayton, was divided in equal parts; the character of the soil throughout was the same so far as could be determined; all was held to be of equal value. The whole had been cultivated for thirty successive years. Upon the division referred to above, one-half passed into the hands of a mechanic who had been reared upon a farm in Massachusetts; the other half was retained by the son of the original owner. This son was a typical Oregon farmer. The mechanic, having nothing to do at his trade that spring, bought a heavy team of horses and a suitable plow, and began working his ground. To use his expression, he "turned up the other side of the soil to see what would come of it," adding, "that is what I'd have to do in New England if I expected a crop." After plowing deep he thoroughly harrowed the ground, cross-plowed, then harrowed again, then seeded, then harrowed the grain in, thus plowing the ground twice and harrowing three times. Being observant of the condition of the soil at the time the work was done, it may be easily understood that the mechanic had his crop in under the most favorable conditions. He was laughed at by his neighbors and called a "Yankee 'crank,' who had come west to teach Oregonians how to farm." The mechanic bore the jeers and scoffs of the community good-naturedly, only observing that it might be true that he was "wasting time in Oregon, but thorough work in farming would pay in Massachusetts." The owner of the other thirty-five acres—the T. O. F.—put in his crop in his usual way, plowed shallow, harrowed carelessly, took no pains with his work, and got through with it quickly as possible, taking two weeks less time than the mechanic. Bear in mind that both fields were worked at the same time, and the same quantity of seed sown per acre. The only difference was that the mechanic put in two weeks more of work in cultivation preparatory to seeding than the other man. Now for the result: Both fields were harvested in September. The mechanic had 1200 bushels of wheat, and the other man 900; one field averaging thirty-four bushels to the acre and the other a little less than twenty-six. So much for an extra two weeks of careful, pains taking cultivation. Did it pay? The price of wheat in the fall of 1882, I believe, was 75 cents a bushel. This gave the mechanic $225 more than his neighbor. Take into account a small sum extra for threshing and transportation, and the mechanic had at least $200 as his reward for doing his work well, without taking into consideration the superior condition of his field for the next year's crop. This was certainly a good return for two weeks' work.

Nervous, Blood & Sexual Diseases.

The Doctor has for many years been connected with institutions whose sole province is the treatment of Chronic and Special Diseases, and can safely promise to cure a large majority of the cases that present themselves.

Besides being a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, he has taken a course of instruction at the University of Berlin, and may be consulted in German.

The Doctor is thoroughly equipped with apparatus for the administration of oxygen, compressed air and electricity, and since the opening of his branch office at Portland, he has effected cures in many cases that had baffled all human skill.

He invites the afflicted to call and investigate his method of treatment.

Consultation free. Hours, 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.; 7 to 8 evening.

DR. SPINNEY.

THE CELEBRATED SPECIALIST,

Whose name is a household word throughout the United States and Canada, needs no introduction to the people of the Pacific coast, but would simply announce that he is now permanently located at Multnomah Block, opposite Postoffice, Portland, Or., where he continues to treat, with the same wonderful success as of old,

ALL CHRONIC, NERVOUS & PRIVATE DISEASES

such as Lost Manhood, Nervous and Physical Debility, Exhausted vitality, Seminal Weakness, Spermatorrhœa, Prostatorrhœa, Impotency, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Syphilis, Diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Heart and Stomach; Premature Decline, Weakness in Women, and all Functional Derangements that result from youthful follies or excess in later years.

YOUNG MEN

Who may be suffering from the effects of youthful follies or indiscretion will do well to avail themselves of this, the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity. DR. SPINNEY will Guarantee to Forfeit $500 for every case of Seminal Weakness or private disease of any kind or character which he undertakes and fails to cure

Middle-aged Men

There are many at the age of 30 to 60 who are troubled with too frequent evacuations of the bladder, often accompanied by a light smarting or burning sensation and a weakening of the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. On examining the urinary deposits a ropy sediment will often be found, and sometimes small particles of albumen will appear, or the color will be of a thin whitish hue, again changing to a dark and torpid appearance. There are many men who die of this difficulty, ignorant of the cause, which is the second stage of seminal weakness. DR. SPINNEY will Guarantee a Perfect Cure in such cases, and a healthy restoration of the genito-urinary organs. Address Box 623, Portland, Or.

Cancer of the Tongue.

My wife, some three or four years ago, was troubled with an ulcer on the side of her tongue near the throat. The pain was incessant, causing loss of sleep and producing great nervous prostration. Accompanying this trouble was rheumatism. It had passed from the shoulders and centered in the wrist of one hand, she almost losing the use of it. Between the suffering of the two, life had grown burdensome. By the use of a half dozen small-sized bottles of Swift's Specific, she was entirely relieved and restored to health. This was three years ago, and there has been no return of the disease.
